HIGHLIGHTS

WORLD ECONOMIC & MARKET DEVELOPMENTS

GLOBAL MARKETS: Major equity market indices traded near multi-year highs on Wednesday on growing optimism about the global economic outlook. Meanwhile, relief that Catalonia's leader, Carles Puigdemont, put declaration of independence on hold to allow time for talks, also favored risk-on sentiment. In FX markets, the euro capitalized on easing political tensions over Catalonia, while strong macroeconomic data in the euro area also boosted investors' confidence. Meanwhile, increasing concerns that President Trump's public feud with influential fellow Republican Tennessee Senator Bob Corker could damage his impetus for a tax plan weighed on the US dollar.

GREECE: In its World Economic Outlook (WEO) report, October 2017, the IMF revised downwards its projections for Greece's GDP annual growth to 1.8% for 2017 and 2.6% for 2018 (from 2.2% in 2017 and 2.7% in 2018 in its WEO, April 2017 report). The unemployment rate has been revised upwards to 22.3% in 2017 (from 22% in April) and to 20.7% in 2018 (from 20.2% in April). As regards the primary surplus, the IMF foresees it at 1.7% of GDP for 2017 and 2.2% of GDP for 2018, below the ESM programme targets of 1.75% and 3.5% of GDP respectively.

SOUTH EASTERN EUROPE

ROMANIA: Inflation accelerated in September entering within the lower bound of NBR's target 2.5% ±1% interval. On the political front, Prime Minister Mihai Tudose reportedly said on Tuesday that the ruling Social Democratic Party (PSD) will decide on Thursday on whether to endorse a government reshuffle. In other news, Romania raised yesterday €1bn in a re-tap of its 2.375% April 2027 Eurobond.

GLOBAL MARKETS

Major equity market indices traded near multi-year highs on Wednesday on growing optimism about the global economic outlook. The International Monetary Fund upgraded its global economic growth forecasts for 2017 and 2018 by 0.1 pps each to 3.6% and 3.7%, respectively, driven by a pickup in trade, investment, and consumer confidence. Meanwhile, relief that Catalonia's leader, Carles Puigdemont, put declaration of independence on hold to allow time for talks, also favored risk-on sentiment. In his long-awaited speech to the Catalan parliament on Tuesday, Carles Puigdemont did not make an official declaration of independence from Spain and postponed any formal steps to that end. Against this backdrop, Spain's benchmark IBEX 35 Index was trading 1.5% higher in early European trade on Wednesday at around 10,288 points, while the 10-yr government Spanish bond yield fell 5 bps to 1.65% in early trade before consolidating around levels of 1.66% shortly after. As a result, the spread between Spanish and German 10-yr government bond yields narrowed to 118 bps at the time of writing, the lowest level in three weeks. In FX markets, the euro capitalized on easing political tensions over Catalonia, while strong macroeconomic data in Germany (August industrial output and exports) also boosted investors' confidence. As a result, the EUR/USD hit a two-week high of 1.1845 in early European trade, recovering from a seven-week low of 1.1669 on Friday. Meanwhile, increasing concerns that President Trump's public feud with influential fellow Republican Tennessee Senator Bob Corker could damage his impetus for a tax plan weighed on the US dollar, with the DXY dollar index trading around a two-week low of 93.058 earlier today, ahead of the release of the minutes of the September FOMC meeting later in the session.

The unemployment rate has been revised upwards to 22.3% in 2017 (from 22% in April) and to 20.7% in 2018 (from 20.2% in April). As regards the primary surplus, the IMF foresees it at 1.7% of GDP for 2017 and 2.2% of GDP for 2018, below the ESM programme targets of 1.75% and 3.5% of GDP respectively. # Latest economic & market developments in the CESEE region

CESEE MARKETS

Inflation accelerated in September entering within the lower bound of NBR's target interval (2.5%  $\pm$ 1%). In more detail, CPI stepped up to 0.5% MoM/+1.8% YoY in September from -0.2% MoM/+1.2% YoY in August overshooting market expectations of 0.3% MoM/+1.6% YoY. The increase reflects the monthly spike of the volatile food component as a result of the increased prices for vegetables (+2.6% MoM) and eggs (+4.2% MoM) but also the fuel prices acceleration mirroring the reintroduction of excise tax as of September and the pass through of higher international energy prices. As a result, food prices accelerated to +0.5% MoM/+2.7% YoY in September up from -0.9% MoM/+1.6% YoY in August. Meanwhile, nonfood prices were up by +0.5% MoM/+1.9% YoY in September from +0.1% MoM/+1.6% YoY in August. On top, services' prices increased on a monthly basis by +0.3% MoM/-0.2% YoY in September compared to +0.2% MoM/-0.5% YoY in August driven by higher prices for urban transportation, rents and sewage services.

Overall, underlying inflationary pressures are building up in late months. The adjusted Core CPI (excluding administered and volatile prices, alcohol and tobacco) climbed further to 1.8% YoY in September up from 1.6% YoY in August, the highest level since November 2013. The PPI (Producer Price Index) heated up to 4% YoY in August up from 3% YoY in July vs. only 0.9% YoY last December, driven by higher energy and intermediary goods' prices. The regulated price increase for energy as of July and the increase of excise duty for fuel in September plus the underlying inflationary pressures are going to push the headline even higher at 1.9% YoY (according to the revised NBR forecast) by year end. In any case, given the projected inflation trajectory and the elevated fiscal risks, NBR was inclined to initiate the tightening cycle in the last MPC meeting - in line with market expectations - by narrowing the interest rate corridor by 25 bps instead of the KPR, which currently stands at 1.75%.

More specifically, the MPC decided to narrow the symmetrical corridor of interest rates on the NBR's standing facilities around the KPR to +/-1.25% from +/-1.50%. As a result, the interest rate for the permanent deposit facility was increased to 0.5% (from 0.25%) and the interest rate for the permanent credit facility was lowered to 3.0% (from 3.25%). During the post-meeting press conference, Governor Isarescu signaled that another narrowing of the standing facilities corridor to +/-1.0% would be delivered in the following months.

On the political front, Prime Minister Mihai Tudose reportedly said on Tuesday that the ruling Social Democratic Party (PSD) will decide on Thursday on whether to endorse a government reshuffle. According to media reports, the Premier is considering asking several ministers to resign citing inefficiency, with three currently under investigation by anti-corruption prosecutors. Among those currently under investigation is Deputy Prime Minister Sevil Shhaideh for suspected abuse of office in a land transfer probe, who is considered to be a close ally to party leader Liviu Dragnea. Recall that, the latter could not take over the post of the Prime Minister following his party's victory in last years' election as President Iohannis refused to appoint him due to his conviction for vote-rigging in the 2012 presidential impeachement referendum that resulted in a two-year suspended sentence. However, he has retained the post of PSD leader and earlier this year backed the topple of previous Prime Minister Sorin Grindeanu.

In other news, Romania raised yesterday €1bn in a re-tap of its 2.375% April 2027 Eurobond. The paper was sold at 128bps over mid-swaps, slightly below guidance of +130-135bps and an initial price target of +140bps. The €1 bn placement comes on top of the previous €1.75 bn issue in last April.
